Debdatta Dobe receives prestigious scholarship of the Hague Academy of International Law - Summer 2010, the Hague, the Netherlands

GNLU is pleased to announce that Ms Debdatta Dobbe (Batch 2006) is awarded a prestigious scholarship to undertake public international law course at the Hague Academy of International Law, the Hague, the Netherlands, in Summer 2010.

Prestigious for its public and private international law courses, the Hague Academy of International Law, offers courses comprising of six weeks of teaching of private and public international law. It attracts law students of the undergraduate level from around the world. Lecturers with strong academic leanings come from various fronts, mostly from the academia, international institutions, government or from law practice, giving lectures on general as well as highly specialized fields of private and public law. The continuing significance of the Academy is due not only to bringing the best in the field to teach, but also in making their research available as part of the larger corpus of scholarly writings. The Hague Academy is housed in the Peace Palace which also hosts the International Court of Justice and the Permanent Court of Arbitration.

GNLU congratulates Debdatta and wishes her all the best in her academic pursuit at the Hague.
